Axxess Wins Excellence in Healthcare Technology Award

Company Recognized by D CEO Magazine as a Healthcare Leader

DALLAS (Nov. 20, 2014) – Axxess, an industry leader in home health management software, garnered a coveted industry award 'Achievement in Medical Devices/Technology' from D CEO magazine. The prestigious Dallas/Fort Worth business magazine honored DFW healthcare industry leaders at an award ceremony and featured winners in its December issue. Axxess CEO John Olajide is profiled in the feature.

"We are honored and humbled to receive this award from D Magazine," said Olajide. "It's an affirmation of our dedication to advance healthcare through innovative technology. It's also a tribute to our talented team that works together to provide the best software solutions and mobile applications in the industry. Our commitment is steadfast: helping healthcare professionals to focus on patient care, not paperwork."

Axxess provides integrated cloud-based software that empowers home healthcare organizations to manage all aspects of their operations, so they can grow their business while improving patient outcomes.

The editorial staff of the D CEO magazine selected 30 finalists and winners, in 11 categories, from more than 180 nominations. According to D CEO, "The [healthcare] sector adds more than $52 billion to the local economy each year and supports at least 600,000 regional jobs.

It's also tough to find a field with a more virtuous mission; after all, healthcare companies and workers are in the business of improving and saving lives."
