Axxess Presents at the Future of Home Health Symposium

DALLAS (Jan. 5, 2015) - Axxess, an industry leader in home health management software, will present the advantages of software solutions at the Alliance for Home Health Quality and Innovation's symposium on the "Future of Home Health" to be held January 13 in Washington D.C. The company is also sponsoring the Future of Home Health project and this event.

The Future of Home Health is a research-based, strategic planning project developed to improve stakeholders and leaders' understanding of how home healthcare is currently used and how it will be used in the future for older and disabled Americans. "We're proud to be a partner and supporter of the Alliance," said John Olajide, President and CEO of Axxess. "The right technology solutions play a critical role in helping to reduce healthcare expenditure while improving patient outcomes".

C. Sam Smith, Vice President of Business Development at Axxess, will present technology's role in operational efficiency, fraud prevention, regulatory compliance, value-based purchasing, collaborative communications, remote patient monitoring and mobile accessibility. The symposium will feature other industry experts speaking on topics such as the interdisciplinary home health team of the future, payment and policy reforms for community-based care and the strategic role of health information technology.

Smith is responsible for Axxess business development and industry relations. He joined the company in 2010, with more than thirty years of experience in strategic planning and entrepreneurship. Prior to joining Axxess, Smith served as founder and president of Vi3

Technologies, an information technology consulting firm. Previously, Smith was involved in the establishment of several companies in the technology and data industries. He also founded and served as president and CEO of Synergy Bank and First Waco National Bank.
