By National Diversity Council

DALLAS, November 8, 2016 - Melody Lenox, vice president of human resources at Axxess, a national leader in home healthcare technology, was recognized among the Top 15 Women in Business by the National Diversity Council at the Dallas Women's Conference awards luncheon on November 2.

Lenox was awarded this honor for her exceptional leadership within her organization and her profession. In her position, Melody has been instrumental in helping Axxess become the fastest-growing technology company in the home health industry.

"I am honored to receive this recognition, which validates all of the efforts we have made to create a diverse and special culture at Axxess," Lenox said. "We strongly believe that diversity is an essential part of innovation and finding creative ways to address unmet needs in the home healthcare industry. It has also contributed to our culture of excellence within an atmosphere of openness, which has helped Axxess be recognized nationally as among 'The Best Places To Work.'"

Lenox said maintaining diversity is intentional at Axxess. The company now has 33 countries represented among its 200-plus employees, and it maintains gender balance, as well as diversity in the ages of its employees. Each of these factors is uncommon for a technology company; together, they make Axxess unique.

Lenox is responsible for Axxess' global human resources strategy, leading organizational change, leadership development, talent acquisition, diversity, performance development, benefits and the execution of human resources processes. She joined Axxess in 2012 as human resources manager and was instrumental in increasing the workforce by 85 percent within the first year.

Lenox has been delivering innovative HR solutions for more than 15 years, bringing her expertise to a variety of national and multi-national Fortune 500 corporations, including Blockbuster Inc., ConAgra Foods, and Beverly Enterprises (now Golden Living).

Lenox is a member several civic and community organizations and is committed to the advancement of the HR profession.

She is a member of the Dallas Friday Group, Society of Human Resources Management (SHRM), and Dallas Human Resources (DallasHR), Junior League of Collin County, The First Tee of Dallas, and a charter member of the Jesse D. Hawkins Lion's Club (the first African American Lion's Club in Hot Springs, Arkansas). She is also a mentor with the Health Wildcatters, The Dallas Entrepreneur Center (DEC) and Boys & Girls Club.
