Axxess Expands Communications Team

Laura Barnett Named Director of Corporate Communications; Johnathan Eaves Named Manager of Corporate Communications

DALLAS, Feb 21, 2018 - Axxess, the fastest-growing home healthcare technology company, has bolstered its efforts to elevate its profile and increase awareness on the value of care in the home with two new hires.

Laura Barnett, who previously served as Vice President of Spaeth Communications, joins Axxess as Director of Corporate Communications. Johnathan Eaves, who worked more than 10 years as a television news producer, joins the company as Manager of Corporate Communications.

"Laura and Johnathan bring experience and creativity to Axxess that will help us continue to promote our latest innovations to make lives better, and increase public understanding and appreciation for the value of care in the home," said Dennis Petroskey, Senior Vice President of Corporate Communications at Axxess. "With the growing need for home care as the most affordable and preferred option for healthcare, we will be expanding our communications to a broader audience.

"At the same time, we will be continuing to showcase the company's corporate citizenship activities and culture, which has led to Axxess being an acknowledged 'Best Place to Work' and leading innovator in home healthcare."

Barnett began her career as a news anchor at KTXS-TV in Abilene. After joining Spaeth Communications, she prepared clients for media interviews, and developed and implemented communications and media relations strategies. Barnett also has extensive experience in professional services marketing and public education. She is a graduate of the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Eaves worked for more than 10 years as a television news producer, including work at stations in San Antonio and Oklahoma City. He is a graduate of Abilene Christian University.
