Axxess Presents White Paper on Value of Care in the Home

DALLAS, February 13, 2018 – Axxess, a leading healthcare technology company, recently released a white paper on the value of home care. As an industry, home healthcare is growing and with the population of those over 65 jumping from 56 million in 2020 to 84 million by 2050, the needs will only increase.

Home care provides a solution that patients prefer because of its cost, comfort and convenience. The new Axxess white paper, “The Case for Care in the Home,” showcases research indicating that home care will provide patients with the healthiest and least-expensive option. Axxess has combed through data to outline the reasons home-based care is beneficial to patients and families.

Based on the latest available research and insight from industry experts, Axxess has identified four key benefits of home care:

- An enhancement to the patient’s care continuum
- A more satisfying outcome for patients
- An overwhelming number of patients prefer health care in their home
- Home care is the most cost-effective option

“Simply put, home health care is where health care is going,” Axxess founder and CEO John Olajide said. “People want high quality, cost-effective healthcare where they are most comfortable.”

Axxess has proven to be a thought leader in the home care industry by regularly releasing white papers that seek to drive the conversation forward and examine issues of direct importance to home health care providers across the country.
