Forcura and Axxess Announce Home Care Software Integration

Partnership Also Includes Home Health and Hospice Solution Integrations

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., August 3, 2022 – Forcura, a clinical communications and collaboration technology company, announced a strategic extension of its partnership with Axxess, a leading technology innovator for healthcare at home, to enable safer patient care coordination and transitions. This partnership will provide Axxess' home care client organizations the ability to manage the workflow associated with onboarding new clients, as well as the coordination of care for existing clients through an API integration with Forcura. The Forcura platform combines workflow and collaboration tools, third-party engagement capabilities, and analytics to support healthcare providers across multiple care settings and services.

Forcura gives Axxess' home care clients the ability to receive, send, track and manage client documentation and communication in a central, digital location, resulting in expedited client onboarding and care delivery. This modern, integrated solution empowers home care providers to be better connected to business stakeholders such as referral sources, operate more efficiently and ultimately improve their bottom line.

Annie Erstling, Chief Strategy Officer at Forcura, said: "As the personal care industry strives to embed itself more meaningfully in the care continuum, the need for sophisticated yet intuitive technology is no longer optional; it becomes foundational to the industry's success. I'm thrilled to deepen Forcura's relationship with Axxess and provide home care providers with an integrated solution that can truly transform their business."

Tim Ingram, Executive Vice President of Interoperability at Axxess, added: “Our partnership with Forcura has provided tremendous benefit to our clients across our ecosystem of solutions. We know that this expansion will extend those benefits to our home care clients as they focus on streamlining their operations to grow business. We are grateful to work with a partner like Forcura as we collaborate on new ways to create positive change in the care at home industry.”
